Case Study

Brief

Following rapid growth, this Basingstoke-based IT company felt it was imperative to create a space that would compliment their expansion plans.

This included developing a welcoming environment for client meetings, as well as improving staff welfare throughout.

The Project

The office design and fit-out consisted of a modern breakout space, two meeting rooms and the provision of new office desks and chairs.

With a current staff of eight in an office space that caters for over double that, it was vital that the office design and space planning was developed to allow for extra desks for up to twenty people.

We worked diligently with the team at Infradata to design an office space that demonstrated agile working and workplace efficiency for their growing team.

The large breakout area was designed to encourage collaboration, including a large seating area for employees to enjoy lunch together and conduct informal meetings. The two meeting rooms differed in size to allow options based on the size of a specific meeting.
